The President's Message

by Phil Carr

The music from Saturday Night Fever was all over the radio airwaves, and Grease was the word at the box office. Happy Days and Laverne and Shirley were the most watched shows on television. It was the year of the first Sony Walkman and the first test tube baby. What year was it? I'll give you one more hint. It was the year that the Nashville Chapter of the Association of Government Accountants was first chartered. On May 16, 1978, a group of individuals got together to sign the original charter for our local chapter. I picture something like the signing of the Declaration of Independence only with lots of polyester. Congratulations on our 25th Anniversary!

And what a history we have! It wasn't until I first attended an AGA professional development conference that I really understood how respected the Nashville Chapter is in the organization. AGA's Distinguished Leadership Award is named in honor of our first Nashville Chapter President and founding member, Frank L. Greathouse. And we certainly have had our share of members to serve in National leadership positions.

Many of the benefits that attracted our founders to AGA in 1978 are still present today. We continue to provide quality and affordable education, we promote professional development, and we help to advance governmental accountability by supporting standards and research.

And yet how much has changed! I pulled Nashville's financial statements from 1978 to have a point of reference. It is about half as thick as the current statements, and it looks as if someone manually typed it. I am sure that no one in 1978 would have anticipated the changes to be made in financial reporting to provide more useful and understandable information to our statement users.

One of the challenges of any organization is to maintain its traditions while changing to meet the demands of our quickly evolving environment. Despite the fast-paced, time-demanding schedules that many of us now maintain, I am glad that the same sense of volunteer spirit that led our founders to start our Chapter is still evident today. Your CEC members and Committee Chairs have been busy over the last few months preparing for the new AGA year. I appreciate everyone's willingness to serve in all capacities in the organization.

Every member has played a part in the past success of the Nashville Chapter of AGA. The momentum is still there; perhaps in another 25 years some of us will be sitting around in our spacesuits honoring our 50th Anniversary.

I hope to see everyone at our first Chapter meeting in September. I am looking forward to a great 26th year!

New AGA Executive Director

Alexandria, VA – Relmond P. Van Daniker, DBA, CPA, executive director of the National Association of State Auditors, Comptrollers and Treasurers (NASACT), has been named AGA executive director by the AGA National Executive Committee (NEC). The appointment is effective October 1, 2003. Van Daniker replaces Charles W. Culkin Jr., CGFM, who retired in July.

Van Daniker has worked in the government financial management field for 30 years, including 26 years with associations. Van Daniker is currently president of the International Consortium on Governmental Financial Management (ICGFM) and was a professor of accounting at the University of Kentucky for more than 30 years. He said he is looking forward to the new challenge. "I am very excited about the opportunity to lead AGA, an organization I have long admired through my years of membership and during my tenure at NASACT," he said. "I look forward to working with the members and staff to keep AGA at the forefront of the government accountability profession."

He spent three years as assistant director with the Cost Accounting Standards Board and chaired a task force to develop and implement a new state-wide accounting system for the Commonwealth of Kentucky. Van Daniker was also the principal investigator for the National Science Foundation grant to develop generally accepted accounting principles (GAAP) for state governments.

He is a frequent contributor to financial management industry professional journals and is the co-author of 10 books and monographs. Van Daniker received AGA's Author Award in 1983, and the AGA National President's Award in 2001. A native of Baltimore, MD, Van Daniker received his undergraduate degree in accounting from Loyola College, an MBA in finance and a DBA in accounting from the University of Maryland. He is a member of AGA, the National Council on Governmental Accounting, the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants

(AICPA).

In his capacity as the Executive Director, Van Daniker will oversee the Association's day-to-day management. Under the direction of the NEC, he will provide leadership in planning, organizing and directing AGA programs, including the Certified Government Financial Manager (CGFM) Program, the Certificate of Excellence in Accountability Reporting (CEAR) Program, the certificate of Excellence in Service Efforts and Accomplishments (SEA) Reporting Program, the Corporate Partner Program, the Membership Program, the Education Program and other AGA initiatives. He will be charged with aligning programs and services to the Association's mission statement and long-range strategic plan.

AGA members and staff look forward to working with Van Daniker, whose record of success in the government financial management field speaks for itself.

The Association of Government Accountants is a 16,000-member professional Association devoted to meeting the continuing professional education needs of financial managers at all levels of government, the private sector and academia. For more information about the Association, or the Certified Government Financial Manager (CGFM) Program, call 800.AGA.7211, or visit our website at www.agacgfm.org.

Is the Worst Over for States? Some are Skeptical

by Alan Greenblatt, Governing.com

State budgets have been in the red for the past three years, but as the new fiscal year gets under way, some officials are cautiously optimistic that the worst may be over.

"There is some guarded optimism around the nation that at least we've bottomed out and things are stabilizing," says Corina Eckl, finance analyst for the National Conference of State Legislatures. States have closed collective budget gaps totaling $200 billion over the last two years. Forty-three states have completed their fiscal 2004 budgets and, in contrast to recent years, none are predicting deficits by the end of the year.

Eckl says that states are increasing their collective spending by 1 percent, while revenues are currently projected to increase by a little more than 4 percent. She also notes that we are now nearly two years past the official end of the economic recession, historically the time when state revenues begin to pick up.

Of course, revenues falling short of projections has been a major problem for states recently, which is why many legislatures have repeatedly gone back into session to close billion-dollar holes. Scott Pattison, the executive director of the National Association of State Budget Officers, says that he is skeptical that the bad times are over for the states. "The data doesn't bear it out," Pattison says, although he notes that budget officers in small and medium-sized states are sounding much more hopeful than they did a year ago.

Growing Demand for the CGFM Certification

by Joan Schwartz

This year promises to be a banner year for the CGFM Program. The Exam Two study guide is out and sales are brisk. Chapters are talking to their membership about sponsoring study groups using the new study guide—one group is planning to have a class in October.

AGA chapter members are seriously working towards recognition of the CGFM certification within their state and local governments. The activity in the Federal government is increasing because agencies have, or are formulating, policies that support reimbursement of professional certification examinations. We have over 700 applicants in some phase of the CGFM Program process. If you are one of these people, don't procrastinate! Now is the time to gain that added advantage in your career development. As Shaun Bridge, an AGA member and CGFM holder indicated recently, "Being a member of AGA as well as participating in the CGFM Program has enhanced my opportunities for promotion." Mr. Bridge's supervisor commented that his commitment to certification gave him the edge in being promoted.

Nationally, there is a growing demand by employers for a certification credential. The first few years of this decade has seen a greater growth in certifications than at any other time. If the trend continues, there will be more certifications available by 2010 than in any past decade according to the National Certification Commission. More employers are looking for a tangible way to measure employees' knowledge and skills. Training budgets may be shrinking, but demand for knowledgeable, skilled and experienced personnel is increasing.

For those of you who have already begun the CGFM Program and for those of you who are thinking about it - just do it!!
